

Who We Are

Founded in 2011, The CP Journal specializes in behavioral analysis, helping people more accurately read and assess the intentions of those around them

What We Do

By combining validated scientific concepts with professional experience we teach people how to read human behavior and offer steps on how to take action

What it Means to You

By being able to better understand human behavior you will be better equipped to create a safe environment for everyone you are tasked with protecting - preventing attacks before they happen

Overview

We teach security professionals how to read the uncontrollable and universal elements of behavior to proactively identify threats. With a focus on prevention, protectors can learn to recognize the pre-event indicators that are present in active shooter, assassination and workplace violence incidents. This advance warning allows for the early intervention and mitigation of risks. In addition to learning what cues cause a person to stand out from the crowd, students also learn how to communicate why a person's behavior attracted their attention, helping to ensure accuracy, and confidence and assisting when documenting incidents.

Problem

Corporate security departments and executive protection professionals face a significant challenge trying to balance the requirements of ensuring the safety of those within their care and the realities of operating within a business environment. The tradeoff between costs, efficiency and protection can be difficult and often changes from situation to situation. This ambiguity and uncertainty tends to slow down the decision making process and causes wavering levels of confidence.

Solution

Developing a greater understanding of the behavioral science that drives nonverbal communication and how that can improve threat recognition is the core principle of the Tactical Analysis program. This has proven to be effective at identifying attackers, both "insiders" and "outsiders," attempting to conceal their violent intentions. Through the observation process taught in the course, our clients learn how to recognize the important behavioral cues to make informed decisions.

Benefit

Our program has been recognized for being able to provide private security firms with the ability to:

- Establish the baseline for any situation a client finds him or herself in
- Employ situational awareness and enhanced mental preparation
- Understand nonverbal behavior and how that reveals attackers hiding in the crowd
- Communicate why a person's behavior was anomalous, assisting in incident documentation and ensuring unbiased assessments

"The CP Journal provides ready-to-use tools and takeaways that can be applied immediately... Students leave better prepared to identify pre-incident indicators and stop or avoid a threat before an incident occurs." - Patrick Kane, Senior Director of Security, Atlas Air
